On 22 and 23 September, the IV and last Transnational Project Meeting of me.green project, hosted by the partner HUB NICOSIA, was held in Nicosia (Cyprus).

During the meeting, the partners shared the results achieved by the communities of practices at the national level, developing a culture of change and social and environmental sustainability among young people.

Moreover, the contribution of the partner APNED was fundamental, presenting the report produced by the young people during the Transnational Training Course, held in Palermo in October 2021. The report presents the considerations raised by young people and the good practices that communities have identified in each partner country and shared during the Transnational Training Course.

What emerged from this meeting is that the me.green project has achieved the main objectives, such as: enhancing the skills of youth workers and young people with scientific and social skills, actively participating in the achievement of the impacts required by the 2030 Agenda; increasing information capacity among young people from reliable, relevant and significant sources, focusing on achieving behavioural change and appropriate climate adaptation actions; sharing a set of good practices identified by the partners and aimed at empowering youth workers, young people and the general population; strengthen their capacity to network in a European dimension.

The main success of the project is to give continuity to me.green, elaborating a project aimed at the drafting of a Guideline addressed to both young people and educators on responsible and conscious behaviors that affect the daily life of each. A guide to raise everyone's awareness on climate change can strike a balance between satisfying individual needs and participating actively to stop climate change.

The project "me.green", funded by the Erasmus + KA2 - Cooperation for innovation and the exchange of good practices, aims to develop a culture of change and sustainability among young people, creating the backdrop for effective climate change, environmental education aimed at behavioural change and a better adaptation to a changing world.

The partnership consists of:

1. People Help the People (Italy) - Coordinator
2. Afyonkarahisar İl Milli Eğitim Müdürlüğü (Turkey)
3. The Hub Nicosia Ltd (Cyprus)
4. CIEP asbl (Belgium)

A project for a green future...
